

Washington Center at Suffolk transcript

00:03 Coming from Suffolk to here
00:06 you get to take everything that you've learned in the classroom
00:08 and apply that.
00:10 I knew I wanted to do the internship program.
00:13 Just the opportunities it provides to meet people
00:16 And to get to know D.C.
00:18 Coming to D.C., that's kind of why I wanted to explore more
00:23 and kind of get out of my comfort zone.
00:25 Back home in Boston, you read the news and you hear about these people.
00:27 But then actually seeing their face
00:30 it was super special and kind of surreal
00:34 to be able to witness that myself.
00:36 It's experiences like this that help you get to know
00:40 what you want to do and see all your viable options.
00:45 You have to make your own path here.
00:46 And in Boston it's a little more laid back and
00:49 here it's kind of like you gotta do what you gotta do.
00:51 Always keep going.
00:52 The expectations are a little bit higher
00:54 and because of that I feel like I'm growing even more.
00:57 You build really good relationships
00:59 so you learn how to talk to people, get out of your comfort zone.
01:03 It's really exhilarating being in the middle of this.
01:07 It's D.C., this is the hub of everything that's going on in the country.
01:11 TWC did a great job of figuring out what my interests and goals were 01:16 and trying to find an internship that aligns with that.
01:19 I'd tell people back at Suffolk that
01:23 if you have any thought about doing it you should just do it
01:26 because the TWC experiences I've had have been
01:29 the ultimate top experiences I've had in my academic career.
01:34 Three months seems like a long time
01:36 but it actually flies by really fast.
01:38 You just want to do this for you
01:41 and you want to build the best experience that you can.
01:44 If you're considering going to Washington through The Washington Center
01:47 definitely do it, definitely do it.
